The Intersect Group Names Catherine Dixon Director of Executive Advisory Services Addition Supports Growth, Expands Firm Capabilities

ATLANTA – April 21, 2008 – The Intersect Group, the premier provider of finance & accounting and information technology services to Atlanta companies, today announced that Catherine Dixon has been named director of executive advisory services. An experienced professional with strong F&A expertise, Dixon enhances the firm’s ability to provide strategic insights to organizations needing transactional and executive advisory services—including mergers and acquisitions, integration planning, strategy articulation, finance and accounting expertise, as well as equity and debt capital raises.

Prior to joining The Intersect Group, Dixon spent nearly five years with publicly traded ChoicePoint as a mergers and acquisitions executive, where she bought and sold a variety of companies until ChoicePoint’s announced sale to Reed Elsevier. Before that, she was an investment banker with SunTrust Robinson Humphrey, where she worked on a variety of capital raise and acquisition transactions. Dixon holds an MBA from Harvard Business School and is a certified public accountant.

“Catherine’s depth and variety of experience, excellent reputation and business acumen make her a tremendous addition to our team,” said The Intersect Group’s Scott Meyerhoff, F&A partner. “Already she’s helping our clients by delivering expert advice and transactional leadership. We’re delighted to have Catherine aboard, and look forward to continued success.”

The Intersect Group’s executive advisory services team works with clients as trusted advisors to help build momentum and accelerate growth. The team applies deep expertise to address client issues, evaluate options and direct key initiatives.
