Former Andersen Partner Joins The Intersect Group To Build and Lead National Consulting and Technology Practice

ATLANTA—June 8, 2010—The Intersect Group, a premier provider of consulting, technology, and human capital services, today announced that Steve Rothman has joined the team to build and lead the company's national consulting and technology practice. Mr. Rothman has over 30 years of experience helping organizations leverage information technology to create business value.

"I am looking forward to leveraging my experience in lean business transformation, agile software development, IT strategy and transformation, and large scale program management to accelerate the growth of The Intersect Group's consulting and technology practice" said Rothman. "Intersect's flexible delivery model, which integrates high-end consulting with implementation-oriented staff augmentation and direct hire is exactly what my clients have been looking for."

Wade Hughes, managing partner of the firm, commented, "We have several opportunities to take leadership roles with our enterprise clients and Steve's experience and credentials make him a perfect fit to head up this effort. In addition, people development is a top priority to allow us to continue our rapid expansion and Steve's leadership will be a big contributor in helping us develop our team into mature client-oriented advisors."

Prior to joining The Intersect Group, Mr. Rothman was a partner in the consulting practices of Andersen Consulting (Accenture), Arthur Andersen, Deloitte Consulting and Infosys Consulting. Most recently, he was a managing partner at IT Renaissance, where he focused on IT strategy and architecture, lean IT transformation, IT cost reduction and program leadership services.
